Tucks on the shoulders in front supply extra fullness over back. The skirt is circular, with straight front panel which insures a perfect hanging garment. This same model might be carried out in white linen for an outing suit, with the panels of the plain material and buttoned along the edges. The sleeves might then be of three-quarter length and the skirt a bit shorter. The effect would be very smart. Any seasonable fabric may be used in its development. For the medium size 8 % yards of 36-inch goods are needed. Two patterns: No. 2143-sizes, 32 to

A Plain Shirt Blouse.

No. 2149.-As a relief from the elaborate lingerie blouse so much in evidence this season the mannish shirtwaist has gained a firm hold upon fashion-loving femininity for morning and outing wear. This shirt blouse is portrayed here for the benefit of the home sewer. It is usually made of some plain fabric like linen, and kept severely plain, with collar of the same and a small black tie. A pointed yoke appears in back and a small pocket upon the right side in front. The choice of three cuffs is given, the narrow shirt cuff, the broader pointed one and the narrow tucks in place of a cuff. The pattern for the collar and tie are also given. The medium size calls for 31/4 yards of 36-inch material. No. 2149-sizes, 32 to 44 inches bust
